Choosing the right wood for your garden bed.

Why use redwood for your garden bed?

- Lasts longer than other woods such as pine
- Naturally resistant to wood rot and pests
- Durable, can withstand weather year round
- Aesthetically pleasing and ages well

Thicker is better.

We recommend 2x material as thinner boards make for less durable beds that are likely to bow and won't last as long.

What size should your garden bed be?

We recommend a width of 3-4ft and a length of 8ft. 3-4ft allows for easy reach across the bed. Anything longer than 8ft, you'll need extra 2x4s to support the additional length.

► 2x12 redwood for the sides.

2x12 Redwood Con Heart Rough 6.70 lin.ft. #212CHR

► 4x4 or 2x4 redwood for added support in each corner.

2x4 Redwood Con Heart Rough 2.00 lin.ft. #24CHR

4x4 Redwood Con Heart Rough 4.40 lin.ft. #44CHR

► Galvanized lag screws and washers to secure the side to the posts.

1/4" x 4" Galvanized Lag Screws 30¢ea. #144GL

1/4" x 3" Galvanized Lag Screws 23¢ea. #143GL

1/4" Galvanized Washers 05¢ea. #14GWASH

► Hardware cloth with 1/2" openings for protection from small rodents.

24"x10' hardware cloth 15.80 ea. #207974

36"x10' hardware cloth 24.80 ea. #832758

FENCING

Using redwood for your new fence is not only aesthetically pleasing, it just makes good sense. Redwood thrives in our Northern California climate and is naturally accustomed to handle our changes in weather, from rainy days to soaring temperatures. This means increased durability and less maintenance for you.
